Tuesday, February 24th at 3pm Digital Presentation: The Mind of George Washington George Washington is widely known for his military and political leadership, but his intellectual life is far less recognized. In this digital lecture, Professor Denver Brunsmann of George Washington University examines Washington's lifelong dedication to learning in honor of the 290th anniversary of his birth. Challenging the idea of Washington as a man of action rather than ideas, the presentation highlights his extensive personal library and wide-ranging interests. From practical subjects like government and military strategy to classical literature, anti-slavery writings, and works by female authors, Washington emerges as a deeply curious and thoughtful figure.
